

FAIR HUNT

The other way to hunt...

Falconry in Eastern Hungary

Offer Nr.: 2542

The Hunting Area:

The approximately 12,000-hectare classic small game area (comprising three contiguous regions) features an excellent population of hares and many wild pheasants (not released!) and a very good roe deer population. It is located in Eastern Hungary on the outskirts of the town of Gyula. The annual harvest includes 100 roe bucks with an average antler weight of 300-400 grams, although every year some bucks around 500 grams are also taken. The terrain is quite flat and predominantly used for agriculture. However, these fields are interspersed with small forest patches, many meadows, and streams, making the landscape more appealing than typically expected in this region.

The area does not have a hunting lodge, but there is a cozy small castle-pension within the region.
