Roe buck hunting in Eastern Hungary

The hunting area:

The approximately 12,000-hectare classical roe deer area (consisting of three contiguous hunting grounds) is located in Eastern Hungary, on the outskirts of the city of Gyula. The annual harvest is 100 roe bucks with an average antler weight of 300-400 grams. Each year, however, a few bucks weighing around 500 grams are also harvested. The terrain is quite flat and predominantly used for agriculture. These fields are interrupted by small forest islands, many meadows, and streams, making the landscape more attractive than one might expect in this region.

The hunting ground does not have a hunting lodge, but within the area lies a cozy small castle pension.
